Love With No Love Of God Is Selfish

The basic error of mankind has been to assume that only two are needed for love; you and I, or society and I, or humanity and I. Really it takes three. Self, another self, and God; you, and I, and God.

Love of self without love of God is selfishness: love of neighbor without love of God usually embraces only those who are pleasing to us, not those who are hateful.

If only two love, love dies of exhaustion, because one can only give so much of oneself. Love is trinity, or it dies. It requires three: virtue, faith, hope, and charity, which interweave, purify, and regenerate each other.

To believe in God is to throw ourselves into His arms, to hope in Him is to rest in His heart in patience amidst trials and tribulations: to love Him is to be with Him through a participation of His Divine nature through grace.

Love of self, love of neighbor, and love of God go together. When they are separated all love is extinguished.

God never intended that the "I" and the "Thou" should be separated. God is so absolute to the full enjoyment of self, nor is He a competitor against the love of neighbor. Such love is God in pilgrimage. But if we would seek the reason why it takes three to make love live, we must look into the heart of God Himself. Human love has reached its peak when it says: "I love you, because God gave you to Me." — Fulton J. Sheen in Love, Marriage and Children.

By DAWN GIBEAU

ST. PALT. Miss. — "Marriage," said the theologian, "is a human relationship. It's not a mystical phenomenon."

This from Edward J. Dirkswager Jr., a 31-year-old member of a profession often accused of thinking otherwise — that marriage is some mystical mythical state which we reluctantly admit. Is entered into by plugging into human beings.

But Dirkswager knows better. First, he's married. He and his wife, Diane, have two children. Marc S. and Rebecca 3.

He also knows better than to short-sell humans. He is, after all a theologian who teaches at the College of St. Thomas. Here.

He is a graduate of Lassen Valley, the international center for religious education studies located in Brustois.

And Dirkswager has devoted a considerable portion of his professional time to describing what — for lack of a better phrase — we call "theology of marriage."

But he doesn't seem to mean, by that, a dogma-like set of standards by which married people should judge themselves. Marriage, remember, is human. And that means few marriages are perfect: some are better than others.

Dirkswager views marriage — human imperfections and all — as an accurate image of God and His relationship to man.

What makes it so is the thing that distinguishes marriage from other human relationships — "the act of sexual communications," said Dirkswager.

"The Old Testament," he said, "seems to be saying, as many as in the field of psychology say today, that because sexual expression is so central to expression of self, it can be the most profound form of human commitment.

And since God is profoundly committed to man — He did create man — we can begin to see why the theologian tends to look at marriage so carefully to help him learn about God.

He's not the first. The Hebrews described God in intensely concrete terms — and often used love, marriage and sexual symbolism to describe God's actions.

Dirkswager points to Genesis, which says man is in the image of God, and further describes Eve's creation as a "completion" of Adam. To Dirkswager, Genesis implies that "man and woman together form a better image of God than man or woman alone.

And St. Paul used the same imagery to the same end: he described the mutual commitment of husband and wife to illustrate Christ's commitment to man.

And back to the Old Testament: Osee, one of the first Prophets to use marriage to illustrate God's action, was married to the prostitute Gomer.

"Osee pursues her," said Dirkswager, "to bring her to himself and make a just woman of her. Just as God continually attempts to make imperfect man just and good — to bring man to Himself."

This becomes a constant theme in the Old Testament to describe how God acts vis-a-vis man," said Dirksware. "I wonder if we aren't losing sight of the faithfulness and constancy involved in marriage today," he said. "Is marriage where the spouses get along perfectly any better an image of God than one like Osee's, in which a faithful partner acts lovingly toward the errant one?"

"Being human is being Godlike," he said. For the married it means a loving response to a difficult situation, respect for each other, responsibility, knowledge of self and the other, faultlessness, openness, honesty and acceptance.

These are the qualities that contribute to 'dialogue,' said Dirkswager.

"We know intuitively when we have touched someone deeply, when a close relationship exists," he said. "That's what we use the word 'dialogue' to express.

Biblical writers called it 'convention.'

"To them," said Dirkswager, "man's relation to God is a covenant, and man's relation to woman in a covenant.

Bridal Photos: Code To Follow

The code of ethics for wedding photographers developed by the Professional Photographers of America, Inc. PP of A makes four requirements of professional photographers who sign it.

They voluntarily agree: (1) to contact the officiating clergyman before the wedding; (2) to abide by the church's established rules; (3) to work in unobtrusive manner; and (4) to respect the dignity of the church at all times.

The PP of A which sponsors this code is America's oldest and largest society of professional photographers; it is a nonprofit trade association with over 10,000 members in the U.S. and Canada. Before this code was available explained William W. Carrier, Jr., of the PP of A: "neither the bridal party nor their clergyman had any really objective basis for choosing one wedding photographer over another.

"But now, if they choose a professional who subscribes to the code of ethics, they get the double assurance that their wedding pictures will be of professional quality and the photographer's actions will never detract from the sacredness of the occasion."

His Military Service—What To Do

The engaged or newly-married couple facing military service has to accept rough days ahead as separations and the interruption of education or career loom with dark realism. For the new wife, a husband off to military service, life means a return to loneliness, or to family. But she's a different woman now — and she doesn't fit well into the old patterns. She's also discovering an entirely new and painful meaning of loneliness.

"Nobody understands that part of you is gone with him. They can't imagine your personal grief, and your resentments sometimes of other couples who don't have to be separated. They wouldn't believe how hard it is for you to get up in the morning. The meaning of your life has gone — and it's hard to work.

"You grow up, though, because you have to face so much — including the cruelty of other guys who keep offering to ease your loneliness. It's a good test of your love," said a young wife whose husband recently returned after nearly two years overseas.

Dialogue between man and wife can — and must — develop this self-awareness, because this is done by focusing in the intimate relationship of marriage.

Neither should there be any room for prima donnas: the man, for of course, embraces the child.

We'll admit that sometimes it is difficult to interrupt what we're doing to listen and talk to children — and they never seem to interrupt — but it is always worthwhile when we do.

Shyly afterwards, however, while the TV news was on and when the kids at the same time wanted to talk about 'stel knitting, Jimmy shouted: "Quiet. I want to wear the news."

But I thought you were all in favor of dialogue, Patrik replied.

Many obstacles are put in the path of dialogue.

Television is certainly one. When the kids shout or are over, then the socialized adult programs take over, dialogue is often lost in the shuffle.

Another villain is household chores that both work at — a man from time to time. Weekends are often filled with so many cleaning, washing, ironing, and mending that the husband and wife hardly have a whole sentence to say to each other.

Every weekend should contain some sort of family outings or activities — a trip to the museum, a picnic, a long walk or ride a bike ride downtown — something that everyone will enjoy. Children should not be hidden from the family's arguments or discussions.

Parents must develop a self-awareness, honesty, and a basic continuity of understanding, because their children are challenging and understanding each other.

Dialogue between husband and wife should also.

Comfort — "Dialogue" doesn't always mean a discussion. Sometimes it is as simple as giving someone a hug when they need it.

example, shouldn't think it is something extra special simply because he is the one in the family who is "employed." A man can possibly be a phony or a prima donna at his job, but he should never be in his family.

Honesty between husband and wife, between parents and children is essential for a healthy marriage and family life.

Dialogue between husband and wife should also.

people assume that their children have the same questions and problems that they had as youngsters. But we ourselves were called to task recently after discussing the idea of dialogue with our children.

"What dialogue?" seven-year-old Patrick asked.

We tried to explain it to him, that it means listening to and his brother and two sisters and trying to understand what others are telling him.

One evening recently at the dinner table, a rather lively, heated discussion on the topic of electronic music. In the midst of what must have seemed like a noisy argument, we noticed several pairs of little eyes gazing at us in unaccustomed, questioningly.

Then we laughed and explained: "Monopoly and daddies aren't talking. We're just discussing."

But with everyone wanting to dialogue, it probably need not be said that we seldom ever have a silent dinner...

As we've said before, honesty is important in relations between people and it is particularly important when parents discuss things with children.

We've tried to be honest with our kids in everything — from when they ask about rare facts to when they ask about sex.

That's what dialogue means: human beings honest with themselves and with each other.

Breathtaking
O Father, heart is filled with a happiness so wonder- ful, I am almost afraid. This is my wedding day. I pray Thee that the beautiful joy of this wedding day may never grow dim with tears of regret for the step I am about to take. Rather may its memories become more sweet and tender with each passing anniversary.

Thus had sent me one who seems worthy of my deepest regard. Grant unto me the power to keep him ever true and loving as now. May I prove indeed a helpful, a steadfast guiding star among all the temptations that beset the humblest of hearts.

Give me skill to make home the best loved place of all. Help me to make its light gleam brighter than any glow that would dim its radiance. Let me, Lord. Thee, meet the little misunderstandings and—care of life more bravely.

With me as I start my mission of womanhood, and stay. Thou my path from failure all the way. Walk with me even unto the end of our journey.

O Father, bless my wedding day, follow my marriage night, sanctify my motherhood if Thou seest it to be so. Make me the bride wherein all my youthful dreams are real, and cares that have left their traces, let physical fascination give way to the greatest charm of companionship.

And so may we walk hand in hand down the highway of the valley of the shadow which we hope to lighten with the sunshine of good and happy lives.

O Father, this is my prayer. Hear me. I beseech Thee. Amen.

Rings Are Most Precious
Jewelry Of The Bride

YOUR ENGAGEMENT ring and wedding bands will be the most enduring jewelry you probably ever will own. Therefore they should be selected with thought and with care. Your ring is something very personal, something to be cherished. You should not let other people influence your choice. The traditional engagement ring is, of course, the diamond. But girls today seem to realize that any ring he gives is only the actual symbol of a sacred promise. Your birthstone or his class ring also form the eternal circle of love. In some instances the groom may offer an heirloom stone which can be reset according to your taste. These are certainly acceptable.

Most girls receive a diamond from their intended. And the purchase of this precious stone will be your first important union together. Both should be mature enough to sensibly talk price. A ring that puts him in debt is no way to start your lives together.

Regardless of how much you plan to spend, or what you intend to buy, consult an established, reputable jeweler. Diamonds of the same size can vary in price because of many factors such as color, cut, and clarity, as well as size and weight.

Modern cutting and setting techniques enhance the beauty of your stones, so that even small diamonds look larger than they might actually be.

Many engagement and wedding rings are sold as sets, designed to be worn together and planned for maximum display of the central stone.

Gifts To The Wedding Party

A traditional custom of the wedding is the gift presented to each bridesmaid and usher by the bride and groom respectively. A token of affection and appreciation for their part in making your big day, the gifts are usually small items which can be worn or carried during the ceremony and reception. Brides usually present pieces of jewelry or compacts which can be engraved with the memorable date. Grooms find keychains, cufflinks or tie clips also suitable for engraving.

If the wedding party is large, a slightly different gift should be chosen for the maid or matron of honor and the best man. The flower girl and ring bearer also should be remembered.

Gifts are usually presented at the rehearsal supper or at a special separate luncheon for the bride and her attendants and the groom and his. The presents should be chosen with care and wrapped as mementos of a happy occasion.

We Have a Pre-Wedding GIFT for You!

In fact, we might have TWO wedding gifts for you. Come in and sign our Bridal Register. You'll enjoy viewing the display of gorgeous, many-tiered wedding cakes in splendid colors and creative ornaments. We'll design one especially for you in your own wedding and reception colors.

Marriage -- A Real-Life Happening

By DAVID GIBSON

Marriage is a happening that can last a long time. That's a good thing. It's also hard, maybe if it weren't expected to last for the rest of your life, it would be easier to think of it be placed at

That long period of time provides ample opportunity for a married person to discover that his partner is really something else, something different.

It takes hard work and a lot of practice to be good at sharing anything else, particularly marriage partners who as it often turns out, don't quite fit the mold one had come to expect before the wedding.

"Constant effort. It's work. It's work without any question. It's not Hollywood. It's honest to God work for people to maintain a good, healthy, stable marriage.

The speaker is Dr. Brady McKaig, M.D., a psychiatrist in charge of couples therapy at the Psychiatric Institute in Washington, D.C.

With a grin, Dr. McKaig had just walked into me a complicated 13-hour work day that includes dishwashing of the hospital, personal hygiene, treatment of in-patients, group therapy sessions with in-patients, as much as 90 minutes a day with telephone calls and extensive administrative paper work.

Despite the work, he answered my questions thoughtfully and often at length.

"So many of the difficulties in marriage have to do with people coming into marriage with a perception of the spouse that really is not the spouse," Dr. McKaig explained.

In other words, engaged couples really don't know each other as well as they think they do. You have to work at it sometimes.

I began to wonder why there could not be some sort of preparation for marriage that would work toward helping prospective spouses get to know each other better and how to love each other.

Certainly knowing - really getting to know the spouse before marriage could help prevent a lot of unhappiness even before the honeymoon it would be easier to think of it be placed at

Dr. McKaig replied, "It's not quite the mold one has come to expect before the wedding. It's not the mold that would work, really getting to know the spouse. You would like to have satisfied or gratified?"

And then, "What type of individual can best respond and fulfill these needs for your marriage?"

By and large, Dr. McKaig said, it would be helpful if those who are not oriented to thinking about such questions could be able to learn in some structure, such as a regular basis for some kind of preparation.

The trouble is when people begin contemplating talking and considering marriage, they're almost beyond the point of having an objective viewpoint about each other. It's so subjective at that point. Obviously, they're very emotionally involved with their partner."

"At this point, how much do they know about their partner? How effectively can they begin to uncover and sort out things they may not want to think about. Things that may well be true, but that an objective person can see? Maybe somewhere earlier, maybe in the schools. . . ." he mused.

I mean, one thinks. Yes, I am aware of certain things about my prospective spouse that I am concerned about or have some question about. How effectively am I going to be able to live with such characteristics?"

But a lot of this will depend on your spouse's reaction."

At this point, I reminded myself that marriage itself provides ample opportunity for getting to know that a spouse is really something else.

Along with problems, some side effects, some communication gaps, husbands and wives do have the opportunity of getting to know each other.

Regrettably, some couples do not find ways of dealing successfully with the problem that can cause them. That is often where Dr. McKaig can be of some encouragement.

"A lot of the success of marriage is involved in knowing where the other spouse is in his or her thinking and feelings - the feelings being even more important than the thinking and then working on the issue of expressing feelings in healthy ways, which is very difficult."

If a husband and wife are trying to do the difficult work of maintaining a good, healthy, stable marriage, they will need to keep their perceptions and assumptions about their spouse in agreement with the reality of the situation. They should develop realistic expectations. They should set up their unrealistic expectations and then begin acting on those unrealistic expectations. Neither should they begin relating to the spouse as if the spouse were somebody else or had the characteristics of somebody else."

"Similarly, a healthy marriage demands that spouses not make unwarranted assumptions about what the other spouse is thinking and then act on those assumptions.

"So much of the difficulty in marriage can come down to a failure of effective communication, a breakdown of communication," Dr. McKaig said.

It occurred to me that you can heal a communication gap almost anywhere you find it, a problem three days ago.

Maybe it seems strange to find communication gaps in such an intimate relationship as marriage. But marriage is a situation that makes it possible for us to have these gaps, for our own good.

There are so many possibilities for getting to know someone, subjectively and objectively, that some communication gaps are bound to occur.

Learning how to leep them and prevent them - what makes marriage like many shorter-lived experiences, an exciting process.

Discusses Vatican II Marriage Views

CINCINNATI — The Second Vatican Council made it clear marriage is "a lofty vacation," not a second-rate way of life, a priest-theologian stressed here.

Father George M. Regan, C.M., discussing "Christian Responsible Parenthood" before teachers and students at the College of Mount St. Joseph here, said the council document on the Church in the Modern World "speaks of the positive spiritual values of the sacrament," of thatrimony as "a value which has to be stressed in our world."

"Too often in the past," he added, "theologians speaking of marriage were prone to say that if the people only had the necessary good will, they'd be priests or Sisters."

Father Regan said the council's emphasis on the value of love marks "a point of development" in the Church's teaching concerning marriage.

The development was not a sudden one, he said, because "there has been a trend leading in this direction over the past 20 or 30 years, but it has been meeting many obstacles."

He recalled that formerly the Church taught that procreation and education of children formed the "primary end" of marriage, and that personal fulfillment was a "secondary end."

"This language is not used in the council document, however," he said, adding that the terms had been "drifting out" of use before the council.

The council document, he said, marks "the final rejection" of the old terminology about primary and secondary ends.

Father Regan expressed the opinion that the old description of marriage had been "misleading," especially for the "ordinary Catholic without a philosophical orientation," who he said would be inclined to take "secondary" as meaning "less important."

"Some interpret the elimination of this terminology as meaning that there is equal value to the ends formerly called primary and secondary," he said.

In any event, the council simply presents love and life as two values not calling either primary or secondary, he said.

Visit Rectory Early

Plans for your wedding begin in the rectory. If you live in a particularly busy parish it is wise to go as soon as possible to schedule the date of your choice. As soon as possible to schedule the date of your choice.

After the date has been set all arrangements are worked out with the pastor of the bride. Be on time, there may be rehearsals scheduled after your ceremony.

To get to Church in Good Time

"Get me to the church on time." is not merely an amusing song lyric. It has its basis in the unfortunate fact that weddings don't get underway on time.

It is a point that priests mention most in connection with weddings. Be on time not only for the wedding, but for the rehearsal, they say.

Not only is it courteous to be on time, there may be other weddings and other rehearsals scheduled after your ceremony.

Most parishes nowadays request that guests refrain from throwing rice or confetti on the church premises. Rice, particularly, is dangerous if not swept up and the throwing of either requires extra work for the church maintenance crew.

Plan Ahead

It is a good idea to make arrangements to see the pastor at least three months before the wedding. This gives enough time to carry out requirements in a calm and orderly way.

If the wedding date is known earlier, there is no reason why arrangements for the Church cannot be made earlier.

In fact, it is a good idea particularly for brides to be married in a busy season. Many brides have been disappointed by planning too late only to find the church already scheduled for another wedding.

Don’t plan the entire wedding before talking to the pastor or parish priest. This is most discourteous and apt to be a source of annoyance. It is the pastor’s right to set guidelines for weddings in his church.

THERE’S MORE to arranging a wedding than picking out a dress as this young couple already knows.

A checklist, similar to the one at the left, concerning the wedding day with reminders on when and how to make all of the orders and reservations can avoid mistakes which could create periods of havoc when the special day arrives.

Fast Ways To Ruin A Marriage

1. Insist on your own way. Never give in or compromise—even on little things.

2. Run home to mother with your troubles. Never try to solve things yourself—or together.

3. Air your spouse's faults in public. Amuse the crowd at party with anecdotes about his or her failings. Never let a slip pass without comment.

4. Put other things before each other. If you're a husband, your job, hobby or do-it-yourself project. If you're a wife, the children, housework, cards or club work.

5. Always wait for your partner to say he or she is sorry first, if you have an argument. Never admit you are wrong.

How To Fight With Your Wife

Quarrels? Sure, like your wife. Unless the marriage deteriorates or license.

The Cana Conference Chicago offers these eight ground rules for the encounter:

• Keep little things little—don't make a mountain of molehills.

• Keep it to a discussion—a difference of opinion need not turn into an argument.

• Keep hold of tongue and temper—we always have the ones we love because we know their Achilles heal.

• Keep it fair—reveal your feelings sincerely. Don't snarl or misstate.

• Keep it current—don't rake up the past to support your present position.

• Keep it short—never let the sun set upon your anger.
Engagement: A Time For Making Certain

What is the purpose of an engagement?

It is natural for an engaged girl to like to see her fiance and to experience renewed pleasure in meeting him frequently.

These meetings should serve above all for getting to know each other better, more thoroughly and more intimately, so as to judge the possibility of a successful marriage, a guarantee of a happy and virtuous life together.

It is a time for reflection before the most irrevocable contract a human being can make: it is a question of making definitely sure that you are not mistaken in your choice.

Above all, the engaged couple should make sure that they share an identical conception of life in this profound significance.

For example, what is the religious outlook of the other person? Does his Christian life consist of only attending Sunday Mass and of occasionally receiving the sacraments? Or is his whole life really ruled by strong convictions, which motivate his actions, help him to make an effort to improve his character, and to master himself in order to better fulfill the duties of his daily work?

If the religion of either party is superficial, then it is to be feared that the Christian education of the children to come will be affected.

A certain agreement is definitely necessary in plans for the future and for the running of the home. If their tastes are radically different, their understanding would probably encounter insurmountable obstacles or would exact such sacrifices that the happiness of one or even both of the spouses would be seriously jeopardized.

HARMONY

It is also necessary that temperaments be sufficiently harmonious. Two truly serious Christians having relatively identical ideas and ambitions, can nevertheless, as a result of profound differences, be incapable of lasting agreement, and thereby find it impossible to establish a peaceful home.

On the whole, since marriage is the most serious decision of a lifetime, the engagement period should be usefully employed in getting to know each other as thoroughly as possible.

How can you arrive at this mutual knowledge?

First, by studying each other. The engaged couple must be able to exchange their ideas, and plans in private. These free and natural talks are necessary; parents should allow the young people the opportunity of presenting their points of view frankly and honestly. The frequency of these talks will depend upon how soon marriage is to take place.

During these meetings you must make sure to reveal your natural self. Too often, engaged couples have a tendency to flatter themselves intellectually, pretend to qualities, talents, or virtues which they do not have, or at least not to the degree they are implying. It is infinitely better to make yourself known as you are, with your true character, your faults as well as your virtues, in their more or less true proportions.

Guide To Correct Wedding Attire

VERY FORMAL

Bride
Evening and Daytime: Traditional gown with cathedral or chapel length train.

Evening: Full evening dress.
Daytime: Oxford-gray cutaway coat, striped trousers, formal white shirt with wing collar, striped or torneg down collar and striped four-inhand tie.

Groom and attendants
Evening: Formal suit with full evening dress.
Daytime: Oxford-gray cutaway coat, striped trousers, formal white shirt with wing collar, striped or torneg down collar and striped four-inhand tie.

Bridesmaids
Evening: Floor-length gowns.
Daytime: Same as evening but gowns are often less elaborate.

MOTHERS
Evening: Floor-length evening or dinner dresses. Small hats or veil.
Daytime: Same as evening but not as formal.

INFORMAL

(Always Daytime!)

Evening and Daytime: Floor length gown with or without train.
Evening: Dinner suit, black jacket for winter, white for summer.
Daytime: Black or oxford-gray coat, striped trousers, gray waistcoat, white shirt, turned-down collar, striped four-in-hand tie.

Guidelines may always be modified according to size, location of wedding, and the time of year. There are no really hard and fast rules to dictate such items as length of the bride's veil or wearing of gloves. Both decisions should be based on the style of dress chosen. Gloves now are considered optional apparel and again depend on the style of gown. There is one exception, and this is for informal weddings where gloves are required.

Check Every Angle When House-Hunting

Are you haunted by house hunting or apartment hunting? Surveys show that most Americans move several times during a lifetime. Even if your first home may not be your last, it is a major investment, so make it your policy to insure against sudden scares like closing costs, landscaping, upkeep and expensive wall or plumbing repairs.

You'll find that the house that Jack built can cost you a lot of “jack” if it has a sagging foundation, gummi gaters, wary or leaky roof. When it comes time to consider the rental or purchase of an apartment or home, study these timely signals.

First of all, buy what you can afford. Many a dream home has turned into a financial nightmare because costs weren't calculated correctly.

In addition to the down payment, consider the money required for preliminary and closing costs, mortgage payments, taxes, deeds, insurance, utilities and upkeep.

Next, add the expenses for furnishings, appliances and landscaping. Then tot up your monthly housing costs.

If you can meet your monthly housing expenses comfortably within your income, and still have enough left over for food, clothing, medical expenses, transportation and savings, then you can afford your dream home.

A home is a major investment. When shopping around, check locations and compare neighborhoods.

Ideally, the house should be accessible to transportation, schools, churches, shopping, recreation facilities and medical services.

Check to see if the sidewalks, street lights, sewers and curbs are installed and paid for.

Look at the building site. Too. Quality of the soil, drainage, and exposure to wind, sun and shade are important considerations all year around.

Both brand new and older dwellings should be checked for soundness of construction. A speaking coat of paint sometimes can conceal shoddy materials and poor workmanship.

Check important items such as the foundation, water supply and sewage disposal, chimney, roof and gutters, heating system, electricity, insulation and storage space.

At the very least, a formal wear, some wedding planning, and a few things for house hunting.
In-Laws Can Be Helpful, Especially With The Children

There is a part of marriage in which young couples give little thought during the happy days of courtship and honeymoon. This is the acquisition of in-laws who eventually become the “grandparents.”

Before marriage the relationship between the couple and their in-laws has been of a superficial nature. During the early years of a marriage we come to know the personality of our in-laws. A wife’s love for her husband causes her to overlook them. They have not yet learned to love each other’s parents in this way.

The very qualities which first made them admire and later love each other have been instilled in them by their parents. What they see as interference by these parents who have molded them is really sincere interest and concern for the young couple. This point is well understood when the young couple have their own children. The selfless love the younger couple show for their own children is reflected in the “interfering” love of the in-laws.

As the years progress the practical business of getting along together is only accomplished by tolerance. A sincere effort to understand the feelings and viewpoint of the in-laws will avoid the clash which may close the lines of communication completely. This foundation once built will sustain a healthy relationship among “Mama, Daddy, Grandma, Grandpa and the little ones.”

Never deprive a child of the privilege of enjoying the company of loving grandparents. The joy of being with someone whose every effort is to delight and entertain is an experience the child will cherish always. Wise parents can help their child draw valuable lessons from such a relationship.

This day of bauger for social justice, a parent must be careful not to allow the prejudices of an older generation to be carried on to the next. He should encourage his child to develop as an individual. If Grandpa and Grandma do not like the man down the street because of his color or the folks on the corner because of his faith, here is an excellent opportunity for the parent to teach the child sound principles of Christian charity.

The impatience of grandparents with innovation and change within the Christian community can be another source of confusion for the grandchildren. In this circumstance the parent must explain the reason for this attitude to the child. Being careful to point out the right of both opinions to exist.

There are also some grandparents who tend to be over-indulgent. Naturally they want their grandchildren to have all the material things possible, things they know will bring the child pleasure. This joy should not be denied the grandparent, but the parent should make the child understand that this good fortune is not but due just for being a grandchild. A spirit of personal humility and thankfulness should be cultivated in him.

Permissiveness is a word used often today. It means simply that young people are being allowed to do and say whatever they please without restraint by parent or society. Parents must stand by their ground on the matter of discipline. If children are allowed extra liberties while in the company of grandparents they must be brought back to the realities of benevolent parents as soon as possible. A firm stand by the parent and a sincere discussion with the grandparents may be one way to avoid this “double standard” of conduct.

As children grew older money plays an increasingly important part in their lives. Grandmas and Grandpa seem to have a money box in the backyard which produces in abundance for the grandchildren. If the parent must see that his child learns the value of a dollar. He should be allowed to accept money, but he must be taught to save for important purchases such as sporting equipment, new tires for the bike, new clothes, etc.

The child who is fortunate enough to have a close relationship with his grandparents has a special opportunity for personal development.

This contact helps to develop in him a respect for older persons and an appreciation of their opinions.

Natural Look Takes Skill

The beauty of a bride on her wedding day should have a natural look, the look which only skill and artifice can bring to give your face the look of radiant softness. It’s best to experiment with new makeup and hairstyles ideas well before the wedding, in order to allow the time needed to find the right, deft makeup ways that will win you the admiration of a “beautiful bride.”

The color of the wedding dress can affect shade of foundation and lipstick, as well as your choice of eyeshadow and mascara. A beige or delicate pink is best.

Lipstick and nail polish shades should be soft to allow a natural looking. A beige or delicate pink is best.

Eye makeup should be light and subtle. Avoid conspicuous eye shadow and mascara, heavily penciled brows. Underpainting is your aim.

Your wedding hairdo should be worked out together with your hairdresser and veil. Take them to your grandmother and ask him to design a style that’s similar to those you have, with slight modifications.

Excerpts From New Rite For Marriage

"Father, by your plan man and woman are united, and married life has been established as the one blessing that was not forfeited by original sin or washed away in the Flood."

"Look with love upon this woman, your daughter, now joined to her husband in marriage. She asks your blessing. Give her the grace of love and peace. May she always follow the example of the holy women whose praises are sung in the scriptures."

"May her husband put his trust in her and recognize that she is his equal and the heir with him to the life of grace. May he always honor her and love her as Christ loves his bride, the Church."

"Father keep them always true to your commandments. Keep them faith-ful in marriage and living examples of Christian life. Give them the strength which comes from the gospel so that they may be witnesses of Christ to others."

"Holy Father, creator of the universe, maker of man and woman in your own likeness, source of blessing for the married life, we humble pray to you for this bride who today is united with her husband in this sacrament of marriage."

"May your fullest blessings come upon her and her husband so that they may together receive in your gift of married love and enrich your Church with their children."
Best of The Books On Marriage

By FATHER JAMES MURPHY
Director, Division of Family Life, U.S. Catholic Conference

Preparation for marriage has always been a serious and complex endeavor, and it is more so today than ever before.

Even before the newly-married could look to their families for understanding and support, they are far too young at the time.

Young people today are the products of a longer and more specialized educational process than places great value in individualism. The decision to marry requires something of a personal recognition and the couple must work out for themselves their plans for family life.

Today's young couples are aware of this, and are in- tent on setting up some goals for married life, and some patterns.

High school and college marriage courses are helpful; discussions with friends and a priest provide insights; the pre-cana conference highlights personal and sexual aspects of the situation.

In the long run, they face mutual understanding of sharing cohabitation, building on a dialogue and a continual updating of information.

The book on marriage and family living can be helpful, and in recent years a number of informative and readable books have appeared directed to ordinary couples eager to get the best from their marriages.

In many cases the authors are married couples or more interested in sharing their insights on solving marriage problems. Within the Catholic community there is also a greater effort to discover and delineate the implications of Vatican II in regard to marriage and family life.

Today's young people are interested in some of the better selection currents in general reading.

One of the most recent offerings is Joseph and Lois Bird, "Grownups Fl969.", Norton.

"It is no longer enough to limit marriage preparations to the faith and practices and the tenets of the family as a system. "Every system" is unique and organic, and each family system is defined by the basic human strengths and weaknesses. The authors take the marriage preparation setting from this continuity from Stabil-Satis-

The following are some of the best books on marriage that can contribute to a more harmonious and satisfying married life.

"The Art of Loving" 1952, Erich Fromm. An inquiry into the nature of love, marriage which has been fraught with many problems, and the newly-married human being.

"Marriage is Holy" 1967, J. Calif. A careful study of the basic elements of the marriage contract. The authors show that every person has his own set of values. But the moral implications of the contract are there.

In many cases these are shared by others, but the emphasis may differ from person to person. Marrying anyone by virtue of one's association will not assure agreement.

Couples must re-examine their beliefs in God, and their marriage the basis of their faith community. They will then be able to understand each other better, and mutually supply the motivation and example that each one needs.

The "Mirages of Marriage" by Edgar and Jeanne 1968, N.Y. Norton. "The marriage is beneficial to the marriage of the faith of the church.

They will then be able to understand each other better, and mutually supply the motivation and example that each one needs. We must face the fact that the marriage contract is a religious contract, and the church will not assure agreement.

It is useful to know that the marriage contract is a religious contract, and the church will not assure agreement.

The "Mirages of Marriage" by Edgar and Jeanne 1968, N.Y. Norton. "The marriage is beneficial to the marriage of the faith of the church. In a dear and loving way, the church will not assure agreement.

In any case the authors are married couples, and are more interested in sharing their insights on solving marriage problems. Within the Catholic community there is also a greater effort to discover and delineate the implications of Vatican II in regard to marriage and family life.

Cuando Se Tiene Amor

Por el Padre Angel Villaronga

Hay más que nunca es necesario preparar al matrimonio. Nunca como hoy se ha sensado tanto, directamente o indirectamente, el estado del matrimonio.

Hay una falsa epidemia y esta incontenible, difun- dida a través de los medios de comunicación social, que quiere desestimar la institución matrimonial.

Hace poco un artista cele- bre, escribió además de por sus actuaciones en la pantal- lona, por sus divorcios. Cary Grant, pronosticaba en Londres la desaparición del ma- trimonio para dentro de unos años. Un profesor de psicologi- a de Washington había dicho la misma pronunciación, pero un ver de seis años el pronostico dio.

Este día la prensa local nos ha dado mucho más aplauso. Y el artículo, acompañado de una fotografía, la que al ver una joven vestida de novia, the traída de mias-las, nos trataba de convencernos, con pruebas de testimo- nios, de que el matrimonio es una muerte.

Proposiciones como la de un triunfo matrimonial para cada persona — uno a los 15 años, con una persona de 30; otro el divorcio a los 30 años, con una per- sona de 15; y un tercero, a los 45 años con una persona de 45. — Y proposici- ones como esta: la idea de tres partes en las que, el matrimonio es una muerte.

La familia, el matrimonio, el hogar.

Y para un matrimonio feliz hacen falta cuerpos que se gusten y se alargan, almas que se comprendan y se complementen y un Dios que nos dé toda eternidad a un amor que para ser verdadero, pide a gritos que se alargue para siempre.

Cuando hay hogar, falta, a pesar de lo que le puede hacer, se alimenta el amor y se alimenta de amor.

En el Matrimonio

En el Matrimonio, nunca dejen que el amor muera. Si puede más que el "nosotros".

Lo que destruye la felicidad en el matrimonio, no es el odio, sino el "nosotros".

La felicidad en el matrimonio sólo puede darse el amor. No estamos hablando de amor físico, sino de amor, es decir, un amor que nos haga sentirnos felices.

El amor es la verdad misma. Es el que nos hace sentirnos completos, es el que nos da un sentido de seres completos.

El amor es la verdad misma. Es el que nos hace sentirnos felices.

El amor es la verdad misma. Es el que nos da un sentido de seres completos.

El amor es la verdad misma. Es el que nos hace sentirnos felices.
