Justice alone is not enough

Mercy must shape our lives, Pope says in encyclical

VATICAN CITY (NC) — In an encyclical on the mercy of God, Pope John Paul II said society will become more human only if people introduce into their relationships, "not merely justice, but also that 'merciful love' which constitutes the messianic message of the Gospel.

The pope warned against programs seeking social justice which are not shaped by love and mercy. Programs based only on the idea of justice "in practice suffer from distortions," he said in the encyclical "Dives in Misericordia" (Rich in Mercy) released Dec. 2.

"Although they continue to appeal to the idea of justice, nevertheless experience shows that other negative forces have gained the upper hand over justice, such as spite, hatred and even cruelty," Pope John Paul said.

"In such cases, the desire to annihilate the enemy, limit his freedom, or even force him into total dependence, becomes the fundamental motive for action; and this contrasts with the essence of justice, which by its nature tends to establish equality and harmony between the parties in conflict.

THE NOTION of "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," which Christ challenged, "was the form of distortion of justice at that time; and today's forms continue to be modelled on it," the pope said.

"It is obvious, in fact, that in the name of an alleged justice (for example, historical justice of class justice) the neighbor is sometimes destroyed, killed, deprived of liberty or stripped of fundamental human rights. The experience of the past and of our own time demonstrates that justice alone is not enough, that it can even lead to the negation and destruction of itself, if that deeper power, which is love, is not allowed to shape human life in its various dimensions."

Forgiveness demonstrating mercy is necessary in human relationships, the pope said in the 83-page encyclical.

"A world from which forgiveness was eliminated," the pope said, "would be nothing but a world of cold and unfearing injustice, in the name of which each person would claim his or her own rights vis-a-vis others; the various kinds of selfishness latent in man would trans-

VATICAN CITY (NC) - Reviewing his five-day visit to West Germany, Pope John Paul II said the Catholic Church "cannot turn back" on the road to Christian unity.

The Nov. 15-19 trip was the main topic of the Pope's Nov. 26 weekly general audience, which ended with a poignant, off-the-cuff plea for solidarity with earthquake victims in the southern Italian regions that Pope John Paul II visited the day before.

"The character and strictly pastoral program of the visit (to West Germany) permitted me - despite the brief time period - to touch on a series of key problems linked with the life and mission of the church in Germany," he said.

THE POPE PRaised the large number of German Catholics involved in lay ministry and the contributions of German Catholic aid agencies to solving world problems.

Regarding Christian unity, Pope John Paul said his visit was linked to the 450th anniversary of the Augsburg Confession, a major statement of Lutheran beliefs.

"Although the efforts made then (in 1530) to maintain the unity of the church did not bring the desired result above all the anniversary of the Augsburg Confession became for me a particular reason to be present during this year in the homeland of the Reformation and to seek an opportunity to meet with representatives of the German Evangelical (Lutheran) Church and of other churches and Christian communities," he said.

The Pope called the meeting with Lutheran leaders an opportunity "for a further development of all the action needed to develop Christian unity, in which we all may see the will of our Lord."

"THE EXPERIENCE of those few intense days allowed me to infer that the church in Germany seeks to oppose those increasing difficulties with the strength and consequences of the faith of those who understand and confess their Christianity 'in action and in truth,'" he said.

The Pope praised the hardiness of German Catholics, noting that thousands came to join in Masses despite rain.

"Yesterday I was able to go, as you know, to the regions of Italy where Sunday's earthquake caused so many victims, for whom I ask your prayers and your charity," he said.

PRASING the work of "Cor Unum," the Pope said his six-hour visit pointed out the importance of the church's work in coordinating, assistance efforts.

Ukrainian-Rite Synod begins at Vatican

VATICAN CITY (NC) - Seventeen leaders of the Ukrainian-Rite Catholic Church opened an extraordinary synod convened by Pope John Paul II to elect candidates for five episcopal posts in Ukrainian places in the United States and Canada.

Cardinal Lubachivisky, a Pole who heads the Vatican's Congregation for eastern-Rite Churches, represents the pope at the synod, which was expected to last a week.

The Ukrainian leaders last met on March 25 for an extraordinary synod convened by Pope John Paul II to choose a successor to the ailing 88-year-old Cardinal Josy Slipj, exiled major archbishop of Lvov in the Ukraine (Soviet Union).

After the synod, the pope named Archbishop Myroslav Lubachivsky of Philadelphia as coadjutor with right of succession to Cardinal Slipj.

Cardinal Slipj, president at the opening ceremony Nov. 25, was also attended by Archbishop Lubachivsky, 14 other archbishops and bishops and a Ukrainian vicar general.

The synod is scheduled to elect candidates for the posts of metropolitan and auxiliary in the Ukrainian-Rite Archdiocese of Philadelphia: bishop of St. Nicholas of Chicago; auxiliary to the bishop of Stamford, Conn.; and metropolitan of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Other topics scheduled include the situation of the Ukrainian-Rite church in the Soviet Union, priestly vocations, the preparation of the Ukrainian breviary and other liturgical books and their translation into other languages, the role of the laity in the Ukrainian-Rite church and the duties of the Ukrainian family.

Week of prayer called for North Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (NC) — Leaders of the four main churches of Ireland and Northern Ireland called for a week of prayer for peace in Northern Ireland. "The closing year has been shadowed still by continuing violence, especially in Northern Ireland, and by the fears, suspicions, sorrows and divisions which this feeds, even far beyond its borders," said a joint statement released Nov. 27.
End hunger strike—N. Ireland bishops

DUBLIN, Ireland (NC) — Cardinal Tomas O’Flaich of Armagh and the five other Catholic bishops with dioceses wholly or partly in Northern Ireland have appealed to seven prisoners at the Maze Prison near Belfast to end their five-week-old hunger strike.

The men, all Catholics, began the hunger strike on Oct. 27 as a protest against being denied “Special” or political status. Two of them are alleged to be members of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), the outlawed guerrilla organization seeking to end British rule in Northern Ireland, and two are said to be members of another paramilitary organization, the Irish National Liberation Army.

THE BISHOPS pointed out that the hunger strike, while bound up with happenings outside the prison and given additional motivation by the memory of past injustices, is also closely linked with “a cruel and inhuman campaign of violence which we have denounced on many occasions.”

The cardinal and the bishops again appealed for an end to that violence which has tormented Northern Ireland for 11 years. They noted that there has been no response to a similar appeal by Pope John Paul II during his visit to Ireland in September 1979.

“Our first duty, therefore,” they said in a joint statement, “is to appeal once more in God’s name, to all those engaged in violence to stop their evil deeds immediately. If all violence were to cease, much might still be done to help those in prison and to bind up the wounds of our suffering community.

“The violence in our midst has generated a hideous spiral of murder, bombing, robbery, the break-up of families and disrespect for life itself. It has filled graves and prisons. It has even continued unabated in recent weeks.

“We solemnly declare that those who kill, wound, threaten or intimidate, those who put people in fear of their lives... are guilty of evil deeds contrary to the law of God...”

For migrant ministry

Dear Friends in Christ,

As we approach the Christmas Season, I ask your continued support for the thousands of Migrant Families in South Florida who often live in squalor and poverty.

The Archdiocese of Miami sponsors several programs to assist the Migrant Families in meeting their basic needs for survival.

Under the direction of nine priests, twenty-two sisters and with the assistance of several other employees, the Archdiocese maintains day care centers, adult education programs and also offers food and housing assistance to needy families.

Our love of God is measured by our love for others. In the true spirit of Christmas, I ask your continued generosity to this Annual Appeal for our more neglected Brothers and Sisters in Christ. The Migrant Mission Collection will be held throughout the Archdiocese on Sunday, December 14, 1980.

With my personal gratitude to you for your concern and love for the Poor, I am
Devotedly yours in Christ,
Edward A. McCarthy
Archbishop of Miami

Mercy must shape justice, Pope says

Justice. “Properly understood, justice constitutes, so to speak, the goal of forgiveness. In no passage of the Gospel message does forgiveness, or mercy, as its source mean indulgence towards evil, towards scandals, towards injury or insult. In any case, reparation for evil and scandal compensation for injury, and satisfaction for insult are conditions for forgiveness.”

The Gospel parable of the prodigal son, the pope said, shows that “he who forgives and he who is forgiven encounter one another at an essential point, namely the dignity or essential value of the person, a point which cannot be lost and the affirmation of which, or its rediscovery, is a source of the greatest joy.”

The pope drew his conclusions about the necessity of mercy and forgiveness in human relationships after discussing the concept of mercy as an essential element of the Gospel message.

One of the basic principles, perhaps the most important principle, of the teaching of the Second Vatican Council, Pope John Paul said, is: “The more the church’s mission is centered upon man—the more it is, so to speak, anthropocentric—the more it must be confirmed and actualized theocentrically, that is to say, be directed in Jesus Christ to God.”

Jesus makes known the love of God for man, the pope said. “Christ confers on the whole of the Old Testament tradition about God’s mercy a definitive meaning. Not only does he speak of it and explain it by the use of comparisons and parables, but above all he himself makes it incarnate and personifies it. He himself, in a certain sense, is mercy.”

In addition to revealing the love-mercy of God, Christ “at the same time demanded from people that they should also be guided in their lives by love and mercy,” the pope said. “This requirement forms part of the very essence of the messianic message, and constitutes the heart of the Gospel ethos.”

Mercy must shape justice, Pope says
The modern white building in the quiet Delray Beach neighborhood houses a busy bakery that few visitors have ever seen. Inside a spotless kitchen, 17 Poor Clare sisters lovingly mix, bake and package a product that will play a key role in the lives of South Florida Catholics — the altar bread used in masses at 175 parishes.

The Christ the King Monastery is the only contemplative community for women in Florida, founded in 1960. The sisters, led by Mother Marv Veronica, support themselves by baking the altar bread, a task that they find is conducive to the contemplative, cloistered life. Because in spite of their important service to the Church and her communicants, the Poor Clares feel that their prayers and devotions are even more important. Throughout each busy day, in the kitchen and in the chapel, they pray for the needs of the Church and the world around them.

ALTHOUGH IT IS difficult to measure the effect of the countless prayers, the bakery statistics are quite impressive. Fourteen million communion wafers a year, made from white or whole wheat flour, are shipped from the monastery. In addition, 270,000 of the larger hosts, used by the priest, represent 270,000 masses. While most of the bread is used within this Archdiocese, some goes to the dioceses of Orlando and St. Petersburg, and a few Episcopalian churches are customers too.

The sisters lead a scheduled life, rising at 5:00 a.m. for Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, Morning continued on p. 5
Prayer, and breakfast. At 7:00 several people from the surrounding neighborhood come by for daily Mass in the chapel, celebrated by a priest from the St. Vincent de Paul Seminary. In addition to kitchen duty, time is set aside for private prayer, reading, and relaxation. One sister makes vestments, and some printing work is done at the monastery.

Mother Mary Charitas, who died last year, was the foundress of the community along with her successor, Sr. Mary Veronica, 20 years ago, at the request of Archbishop Coleman Carroll. Sister Emanuel, who also resides at the Delray Beach address, serves her order as president of a federation of seven St. Clare monasteries.

THE POOR CLARE nuns feel that their lives are an important part of the Church's presence in the world. As one sister put it, "The monastic life is a special calling; it is not an escape hatch, an evasion. You go to the monastery because you want to be nearer God, not because you want to get away from people. In this life there is solitude, the opportunity to come apart, to leave distractions to better enjoy prayer with God. By Profession we are totally consecrated to the Church as contemplatives, called to the task of spreading the Kingdom of God by means of prayer silence and sacrifice."

The next time that you receive Christ in Holy Communion, the altar bread miraculously transformed by the action of the priest, remember the Poor Clare sisters at Delray Beach and their dedication to a labor of love.

Pope ‘spiritually struck’ by quake

NC News Service

"I was deeply moved, spiritually struck, by all that I was able to see with my own eyes," said Pope John Paul II about his six-hour visit the day before to earthquake-devastated southern Italy.

Speaking to about 7,000 people at his general audience in the Paul VI Audience Hall, the pope made a poignant, off-the-cuff appeal for world solidarity to aid the thousands affected by the Nov. 23 quake.

"I was able to see not only the destroyed homes, but also the people, old and young, recovering in the hospitals," he said. "It was a partial vision, but significant."

Help needed for 'quake victims

According to the Italian Consulate Office in Miami there is no longer need for warm clothing for victims of the recent earthquake. The response to this need nationwide has been overwhelming and the Catholic Churches have large donations of clothing on hand and being processed.

The Consul stated that money is much needed for medicines, for aid in temporary housing, and to purchase materials not readily available through the Italian government.

Those wishing to contribute for these needs may send checks made out to: The Italian Consulate: Earthquake Fund, and sent to the Italian Consulate, 200 S.E. 1st St., Miami, Fla. 33131.

that it there hadn't been that service in the church . . ."

The pope interrupted the woman, saying, "It's no one's fault. No, no, that doesn't have anything to do with it."

Later in the hospital foyer he told local residents to "rebuild with humanity that which natural calamity has destroyed." He interrupted his impromptu speech at one point, telling the crowd, "Excuse me, I can't manage to speak because the emotion is stronger than words."

It was the first time that a pope had visited the scene of a disaster since July 19, 1943, when Pope Pius XII went to a Rome neighborhood to comfort victims of a World War II bombing.
Father Pius O'Dea, the seventh of four boys and three girls — three of them in the service of the Church — was ordained in his home parish of Blessed Trinity, in Dromin, Ireland, for the Archdiocese of Miami, recently. He is already happily at work at St. Joseph's in Stuart, Fla.

FR. O'DEA's family has already given a nun, Maire, who is a Sister of Chanty stationed in South Africa, a brother, Stephen, who is a priest stationed here in Perrine, and another brother, John, who is a farm manager at a Jesuit College near Dublin. Add to these several cousins who are both seminarians and priests.

"This was the day I had looked forward to for so long, and at last, it was a reality," said the priest.

"Many priests of the archdiocese were able to be present including my brother, Stephen, who assisted me during the Ordination ceremony. Among the clergy who were in Ireland from Florida at the time and who came to my ordination were, Fr. Gerald Grace, Msgr. Peter Reilly, Fr. Timothy Lynch, Fr. James Murtaugh, Fr. Michael Flanagan, Fr. William White, Fr. Thomas Foudy, Fr. Patrick Organ, Fr. Seamus O'Shaughnessy, and Fr. John Delaney."

FR. O'DEA celebrated his first Mass of Thanksgiving in his parish Church of the Blessed Trinity in Dromin, assisted by his brother, Stephen, and many priests who had been present for the ordination. He gave his first blessing to his mother and father, Julia and Edmund O'Dea. A large reception at the local hotel followed.

Fr. O'Dea was born on June 30, 1954 in Limerick. His great Uncle, pastor of his parish insisted that he be named Pius — for it was in 1954 that Pope Pius X was canonized by Pope Pius XII.

He attended the local elementary school in Dromin, studied under the school in Dromin, and was ordained in his home parish of Blessed Trinity, in Dromin, Ireland.

On August 16, Bishop John Nevin ordained him. "For me," says Fr. O'Dea,"it was a dream come true. It was the happiest day of my life."

During his course of study in this country, Fr. O'Dea worked at St. Coleman's in Pompano Beach, with Msgr. Barry, and at St. Francis of Assisi, under Fr. Leslie D. Caan in Riviera Beach.

His first assignment has been at St. Joseph Church in Stuart, Fla. He finds himself totally immersed in parish activity and "feels right at home here. Already, I know I will be happy here," says the newest addition to the Archdiocese of Miami.

"Faitte roath" is Gaelic for "welcome", Fr. O'Dea.
It is hard to believe some of the garbage that is going down these days, with supposedly intelligent people either too spineless to oppose it or too weak in their sense of values to know what to do.

On an American college campus recently a group of male students wanted to show a pornographic film in their dorm to raise money to refurbish a dorm lounge.

Fortunately, the young women who also live in the dorm were hip to the smut film. They opposed the film on the grounds that such smut is degrading to women, renders them as sex objects and creates a climate of violence against them.

The women were outraged. It was about time, considering the current rape figures in this country.

The most galling aspect to this affair, however, was the college administration which, instead of instantly telling the smirking young men they were not about to bring such dehumanizing trash into the campus living environment, actually were divided on the question. Some members dragged out the old saw about censorship, as though that were applicable.

College dorms have all kinds of regulations concerning safety, drugs, defacing, quietness, rights of others, and such. Yet, when someone wants to show a dirty movie, whether in a dormitory or a public moviehouse, the community suddenly gets a case of the trembles on First Amendment grounds.

What they should have done was state forthrightly that "We will not allow you to show smut films in a 'home away from home' especially in your dorms, any more than your mother would let you do it in your own living room. End of discussion."

After two meetings with the 300 students, the only woman vice president on the board came down hard against the film, and the idea was barely defeated.

How can we expect young men to have values if grown men have none? And, if certain feminists would stop pushing so-called sexual liberation, easy abortion, and the IUD, and start preaching sexual dignity and restraint, then maybe the male exploiters and users would back off.

What our calling really means

My beloved:

I do not know how I can ever express adequately my thanks to you who have prayed for me and sent flowers, telegrams, cards and messages of support during my adventure with open-heart surgery. God bless you! God bless you! God bless you! I love you.

I had not expected the Lord to take me so seriously when I announced that I intended our Evangelization renewal of the Archdiocese to begin with me, the Archbishop. These past days of recuperation have been a special orientation opportunity for me. It was serious business, going under the knife.

The Lord gave me an unusual gift of easy confidence in Him through it all. But I think the unaccustomed hours of seclusion, leisure and reflection were a special gift opening a deeper vision of the unique way of life we are committed to through our unique effort of Evangelization, and of the immense importance and potential of our efforts.

By the loving care I have received at the hospital, I have been having an entirely new experience of the Kingdom which Jesus said would be recognized by the love His followers have for one another. Incredibly skilled and devoted surgeons, humble, partially awestruck, partially nonchalant, always exultant and excited about being God's hand restoring new life to a failing heart.

Little Filipino nurses, hardly tall enough to reach over the bed railing to stroke a brow soothingly. Nurses, aids, housekeepers — all so sensitive to the preoccupation of their sick and attempting to reassure and comfort and cheer by an innocent act that transcends a family check. Chaplains, Sisters, Pastoral Ministers offering rich spiritual ministry while putting not only the patient at ease but looking after the distraught relatives and families as well. Human beings freed of the inhibitions of propriety simply reaching out with the natural love by which Jesus said we can identify His followers.

Under the exhilaration of this fantastic atmosphere of human love, I was struck by a richer understanding of what the Kingdom of the Good News is really meant to be. I began to realize how casually we normally accept our calling to be people of faith and love, people whose lives proclaim the Good News of God's love. And I began to realize more the unacknowledged love the Kingdom of Jesus has brought into our world — often not fully abloom because we ignore the Gospel or are cynics.

I thought not only of health care personnel, but of teachers, devoted priests and religious, of course, of fathers unobtrusively dedicated to the loving care of their families, the countless acts of love of mothers and wives, yes, and of the concern of the cop on the beat and the flight attendants in the air.

Our world-wide Bible is not fully the heady challenge of the Gospels, the vision of genuine commitment to transforming ourselves into the extraordinary God-like persons we are meant to be. "... What is man that you should keep him in mind ... you have made him a little less than a god, with glory and honor you crowned him." (Psalm 8).

No, too foolishly we permit our aspirations, our vision of life to be created by the cynicism, the bad news of the world, in which we live: Weekly we tolerate the news media's sickening destruction of the spirit of our day, and to restore a view and enriching manner of life which was lavished on us by our Heavenly Father when He sent His Son to be the Messiah, to bring among us the Kingdom of God.

During 1981 in Evangelization, we will be attempting especially to renew this parochial life as a powerful means of realizing and living the Good News. We may Advent be a serious season of prayerful reflection on the coming of Jesus, the Messiah, to light up our lives. Thanks again for being so loving in your prayerful concern during my illness.

Devotedly yours in Christ,

We can do all things (with Him)

Several years ago while I heard on the radio a protestant minister deliver an impressive talk, the theme of which was, "What our world needs now is a Saint Paul." I missed the full development of his sermon up to that concluding remark, which was indeed thought provoking. I suppose what he said is the kind of spontaneous tribute that every troubled generation pays to the restless apostle who, in the American lingo, got them home.

It’s rather simple for us to picture him, once he was pierced with the desire to repent for his hatred, hurrying form city to city, defying his enemies, rebuking the lukewarm, suffering all kinds of insults, preaching in season and out of season, ever alert lest anyone miss the good news through his neglect.

A S U N T L E T on what history tells us, it becomes increasingly difficult to explain how he did it all, until you remember he gave the key to it all. He made one of the boldest boasts of all time when he said, "I can do all things in him who strengthens me."

It seems, he crossed the two thousand years and set him down in our world of 1980. And then the imagination gets out of hand picturing Paul as a citizen of our nightmarish world, making use of television, radio, newspapers, books, congressional hearings, United Nations sessions - any medium capable of being used to impress on people the message of hope and light which Christ left us.

One thing sure, whatever methods he adopted, he would be driven constantly by the conviction that Jesus is in him, with him and, therefore, the opposition of governments, courts, scandalized Christians or public opinion polls was not going to stop him.

"Paul would be driven constantly by the conviction that Jesus is in him, with him, and, therefore, the opposition of governments, courts, scandalized Christians or public opinion polls was not going to stop him."

His boast, "I can do all things..." is really the boast of humility. Paul was forever taking into account his weakness and faults. Indeed he gloried in them. It was because he realized limitations that he put his trust totally in God and expected to be driven by divine power.

PAUL'S BRAND of confidence has never failed to sear others in all generations with the same fire. Countless men and women took his boast as their own and were used by God in remarkable ways to spread his kingdom.

However, we sell Paul short if we clarify his approach only with that of the spiritual giants. His boast can be made by the housewife who wishes she could have just one day off, by the maintenance man who has been touched by the Holy Spirit, by the student who is just touched by the elder who depends on the Spirit to help them overcome the sadness of loneliness and the neglect of children.

Paul’s beautiful boast can be shared by all of us. By all united with Christ, we are not going to surpass Paul, needless to say, in amazing astonishing achievements or even coming close to them. The breadth of his mission is not ours. But we have the very same essential mission, namely, to gain Christ for ourselves and to give him to all who believe the gospel to be capable of doing. Despite our few hung on the spiritual ladder, we were created like Paul for the one same purpose - to get to the Kingdom of the Father after the pilgrimage of this life.

Vatican II made bold to tell every laity that he is also an apostle. He has a mission territory to his own - office, home, wherever he is. His obligation is to be a witness to Christ in all that he does and says.

A KIND OF NUTTY theory? Don’t think so unless you refuse to take Paul’s boast seriously. We realize keenly what sorry looking apostles we may be among family members or neigh-

ors. If we have not made a cursillo, or shared in the new devotions to the Holy Spirit or been helped by a discovery of the riches of the Gospels, we know how helpless we are, how much we must depend on the Spirit.

There is a world of wisdom to be found in Paul’s delightful boast. To appreciate it fully, however, we have to learn the hard way that what Christ insisted on was true, namely, "Without me, you can do nothing." It takes a lot of failures, much sorrow, to develop that conviction.

THE SAINTS of our time illustrate this in a marvelous manner. The son of peasant parents, Pius X was lifted higher and higher by the Spirit of God. So was John XXIII who taught the world love for example.

Mother Teresa obviously has caught Paul’s fiery boast and made it her own. Remembering this, she said, "In all that she did she gave it prayer. She made her apostolate a "achievement" (she would resent that word), you have to believe her constant prayer is, "I can do all things in him who strengthens me."

Shocking statistics on Catholics

By Msgr. James J. Walsh

Our country has a fascination with surveys.

Most of them seem to make a sincere attempt at finding out how people feel about something, as opposed to the kind that use biased questions that are intended to slant the results. Often the survey percentages only serve to confirm what we already know, or have a "got feel about. But occasionally one comes along that is a big surprise.

This column often deals with current moral issues, social action, and individual involvement. So when a survey taken by the respected Gallup Poll organization shows Catholics lagging far behind evangelical Christians in both conviction and personal action in several key areas, we want to take a closer look.

A S U N T L E T poll was conducted for an evangelical magazine Christianity Today, which, judging by past issues, shares our interest (and point of view) on most of the key ethical and social issues of the day.

To the item, "abortion is unacceptable in all circumstances", Catholics 59%, felt Homosexuality is wrong. Evangelicals, 82%. The statement "divorce should be avoided except in extreme situations" received 43% agreement from Catholics, 60% Evangelicals. In the area of social action, only 31% of Catholics felt that "it is very important for religious organizations to make public pronouncements about ethical moral matters", while Evangelicals agreed by 70%.

"On the topic of premarital sex, 81% of evangelicals felt that sex prior to marriage was wrong, while only 49% of Catholics did. 59% of Protestants rejected premarital sex and the general public was divided on this issue: 50% - 50%.

WHEN ASKED about personal involvement, the gap between the two groups was still uncomfortably wide. To the question, "do you give help to people in need?", 71% of the Catholics answered yes, while 38% of the Evangelicals did.

"Does volunteer work for church or other religious organization?", 49% versus 31%.

"Contributes ten percent or more of income to religious organizations?", 8% - 54%.

IN the Christianity Today article, writer David O. Moberg argued that, "Possibly one of the most significant findings is that people who read the Bible frequently (at least once per week) and those who are tithers exhibit higher levels of religiosity on almost every indicator that other people... they also have higher levels of social concern, and they donate more time in volunteer services."

While his findings may point out some key factors in a Christian’s life, there are others. For Catholics we can think of several: previous religious education, attendance at Mass and receipt of the sacraments, daily prayer, evangelizing ourselves first, books and publications and involvement in Church activities and organizations.

Why did Catholics fare so poorly in the poll? Does it reflect a major falling away from Church teachings? Have we lost the sense of evangelical fervor that our “born again” brothers have? Have we become infected with a chronic case of apathy? Have we neglected our prayers?

A S U N T L E T survey in error? Possible, but Mr. Gallup’s organization has achieved a reputation for accuracy in the polling business. Certainly, the wording of each statement is a factor, and one may have caused a lower-than-expected response from all respondents. To the item, "abortion is unacceptable in all circumstances" (Catholics, 27% vs. Evangelicals, 31%), many sincere pro-life people who feel that a threat to a mother’s life is the only exception for abortion may have answered “no.”

Maybe this is why the Church is pushing evangelization at this time, evangelizing everyone first. Maybe we need it more than we think.
The story in your life

By Father Phillip Murnion

A good story has a clear plot, a central character, who fascinates us, and it describes a situation that all kinds of people will find interesting. In a good story, the relationship among the characters—especially their relationship with the central character—has to be clear. A good story can be savored. As its images are recalled, we discover that it held more meaning than we first thought.

What is our own story—as individuals and as communities? How is it like the story of Jesus?

At one point, Paul says that we are a story church. The Old Testament stories of the patriarchs, kings and prophets are imbedded in our religious memories. THE STORY of Jesus is continually recounted too. So interesting is it to so many people, that it is no wonder authors and film producers continually try to capture the story.

Memories and stories are interrelated. In every parish where I have served, I have found that individuals tend to become a community when they share memories of certain events.

• The 7 a.m. daily Mass group in one parish gradually takes shape in the form of a modest community as its participants build up a memory bank of past incidents to retell.

• The musicians and choir members in another parish slowly acquire a repertoire of stories they like to retell, as if to underscore the special relationship among those who share memories of the same events, and who serve in similar ways.

In families, hardly a celebration is held—whether a birthday or Christmas or Mother's Day—without the telling of stories about past incidents that disclose a family's story.

When a parish calls on its own amateur historians to write the community's history on the occasion of a parish centenary, for example, the story of the parish becomes a saga of the many memories of its people.

Father John Shea of Chicago does a lot to remind people of the role played in the church and in faith by stories. He does this in his book, "Stories of God," and in his poetry through which he presents fresh views of age-old mysteries and experiences. Father Shea reminds people that the story of Jesus continues to be told and to be written in the lives of us all: individuals, families, parishes, for example.

The parish is the place where we continue to tell the story of Jesus. But each year we see the story differently—we see it anew—because of the way it gets reflected in our own changing lives. So, in a sense, the story of Jesus we retell each year is both old and new.

REMEMBERING THE LIFE of Christ is not only a matter of dredging up incidents from the past. It is a matter of making present the events of Christ's life so that people may associate themselves with that life. We join the Jesus story, become a part of it and continue it. Our own stories, too, become important.

An appreciation of the meaning to be found in the stories of our lives can come from drawing the connections between our own stories and the story of Jesus.

It is extremely valuable when parishes help people with this. Some parishes help people to become somewhat more autobiographical, to trace the journey of life and faith, identifying the main characters in their lives, realizing what "plot" is emerging in their lives, and what "editing" may be necessary.

In simple ways, parishes encourage family members to listen to each other's stories, to set aside the time to do this and to consult the story of Jesus as a way of helping them to reflect on the stories of their own lives.

We will not much appreciate the story of Jesus if we do not appreciate our own individual stories, the stories of those people around us, the stories of the parish and of the groups that make up the parish family.

In our lives, there is a Christ-like story to be told about:

• Obedience to the Father's will;
• Care for the poor;
• Healing and reconciliation;
• The death and resurrection.

"The moving hand writes and having writ moves on," but a story is left in our memories. It needs to be recalled by parishes and their people.

By Father John J. Castelot

When parents are upset by the behavior of their children, they find themselves in the grip of all sorts of conflicting emotions.

The overriding one is, of course, loving concern. But this is mixed with annoyance, disappointment and anxiety. These emotions show up in parental appeals to children, sometimes in strange, almost humorous ways. So it was with Paul and his converts, his parishioners. He was not just a functionary doing a job. Paul was a father and he loved and worried about his people with a father's heart. There was good reason for him to be disturbed by what was happening in the community he had founded at Corinth. To judge by the childish rivalries in Corinth, one would think Paul had never instructed the people on the primacy of love, on the fundamental importance of their oneness in Christ. Paul's appeals to the people reveal his mixed emotions: He is alternately sarcastic and forthright, stern and tender. Having reviewed the situation, especially as it concerned him and his fellow minister, Apollos, he seems to say, in effect:

"Look, you certainly didn't learn this kind of behavior from either of us! We didn't pick and choose among you when we were instructing you, preaching only to an elite, to those who appealed to us personally." (1 Cor. 4:6)

At this point, Paul resorts to rather biting sarcasm. If the people now have something to recommend them, it is only because of God's gracious gift, delivered to them through the services of his ministers. What, then, are they bragging about? They are so smug and self-satisfied that they seem to think they have made it—on their own!

"At the moment you are completely satisfied. You have grown rich! You have launched upon your reign with no help from us. Would that you had really begun to reign, that we might be reigning with you!" (1 Cor. 4:8)

To emphasize how ridiculous their attitude is, he draws a pointed contrast between what they think their situation is and what the actual situation of God's ministers is. It is a movingly eloquent passage, beginning with:

"As I see it, God has put us apostles at the end of the line, like men doomed to die in the arena. We have become a spectacle to the universe, to angels and men alike. We are fools on Christ's account. Ah, but in Christ you are wise! We are the weak ones, you the strong! They honor you, while they sneer at us!" (1 Cor. 4:9–10)

But now his deep love for them comes to the fore: "I am writing you in this way not to shame you but to admonish you as my beloved children. Granted you have 10,000 guardians in Christ, you have only one father. I was the one who begot you in Christ Jesus through my preaching of the Gospel. I beg you, then, be imitators of me." (1 Cor. 4:15–16)

This appeal for imitation is important. Paul not only preached the Gospel, he lived it. He knew talk was cheap, especially at Corinth, with its chorus of ear-tickling philosophers, purveyors of "wisdom." People had to be shown that living as a Christian was really possible. They needed a visible model for imitation. Paul tried his best to furnish that model.

"Just in case they have forgotten, he had already sent his good friend Timothy to remind them and, in turn, to serve as an image of Christ in their midst."
Getting inside faith at home

By Stephen A. Nuunes

Family experiences have a common factor: They are shared. Together, family members can look back on experiences they've had together or joy or conflict, love, frustration or disappointment.

For many families, the dinner table is the most basic, most frequent place for sharing. Around the table family members relate the news of the day - its ups and downs, whether it was a good day or bad day, and why. The dinner table is a place for listening and responding, for expressing ideals, facing reality, even for making decisions.

Around the dinner table, family members share memories. They share attitudes toward jobs or school, anxieties about the world's situation, financial worries, interest in sports events and relationships with other people. They share the interests of day-by-day living. That means they share their values.

It would be interesting to know many families openly share their feelings about the faith around the dining room table.

One thing is sure: When Christianity is related to the life people actually lead today, it offers much grace for the mill of a family's conversation. Take a look at the news stories any day in a newspaper. What is reported in a newspaper - wars, poverty, homelessness, political events, courage, illness - is all within the scope of Christian concern. Christian values speak to the real world of everyday life. Can this be discussed at home?

It seems to me it is important for parents and children to share their feelings about faith - to be able to talk together about the meaning of Christianity. It is easier said than done. Many people have good intentions in this area that have not materialized, perhaps because of the noise of TV, scheduled activities outside the home or simply because they've found it difficult to start - they haven't felt comfortable about it.

But why not?

Does religion seem out of place in a family's life? Are people afraid or self-conscious when it comes to talking about their faith?

A LOT OF GOOD conversations at home have started when a particular TV show or a popular song reflected a certain attitude. Maybe it trivialized the value of a relationship between two married people. Maybe it demonstrated how one person can genuinely reach out to another; maybe it raised questions about what a family is, about the ways people help each other grow.

TV occupies a big place in many homes. It can be used as a natural resource for ideas for worthwhile conversations. Of course, such conversations call for listening on the part of all involved.

I think the key factor in talking about faith at home is spontaneity. It helps when discussions of the faith are natural.

Start with a newspaper article or an incident which occurred that day. Or, take advantage of a religious media event, like the showing of the TV movie titled "Jesus of Nazareth."

Families that watch a program like this can discuss it.

Ask: "How does the actor's portrayal match your picture of Jesus?"

"What teaching of Jesus was highlighted by this particular show?"

Books are natural resources of ideas for family conversations. It is certainly possible for families to take up a book about the faith and examine it together.

When speaking about our values and our faith it is important to speak personally. What does Christianity mean to me, to us, to our family? We need to relate the living Christ to our own personal experience.

It is helpful if parents feel comfortable discussing religious topics with each other and - just for the sake of children.

Parents set the tone of the family. If parents not only choose to be Christians, but find it interesting to discuss the church and the faith, their children will surely take note.

A family's lifestyle reflects its faiths. Talking about Christ is one thing. But when the talk is lived out - whether through some poor or of others - it is given depth and meaning.

If faith is important, it makes sense to talk about it, and to live it at home.

Making music at St. John's

By John Maroney

Music has been an integral part of religious ceremonies for centuries. Long before the Israelites were chosen by God, prehistoric man was making music - perhaps pounding on hollow logs - to an unknown, all-powerful being.

Music continues to play a vital role in churches. "One of the objectives of liturgical reform is to promote community singing in assembles of the faithful, so that they might better express the festive, communal and fraternal character of liturgical celebrations," a Vatican document once explained.

St. John's Parish in Liverpool, N.Y. meets this challenge. This is a parish with 1,150 registered families. Its music, under her tutelage, 50 volunteers today are regularly involved in five different music groups. Music has become an important part of the liturgy in the parish - and an important part of the parish's life for many of the parishioners.

The three largest music groups - the senior choir, the adult folk group, the youth folk group - lead the music during Sunday liturgies, while smaller groups are on hand for the Saturday vigil Masses.

"Being a member of these music groups requires considerable time and energy. Rehearsals are held on Tuesday evenings and for a half hour before each Mass. But the experience pays off for participants who become a sort of smaller community within the larger community of the parish."

"Being a member of these music groups requires considerable time and energy. Rehearsals are held on Tuesday evenings and for a half hour before each Mass. But the experience pays off for participants who become a sort of smaller community within the larger community of the parish."

Participants also receive personal satisfaction and encouragement from the parish staff, which includes pastor Father O'Connell and two assistant priests. Mrs. Salazar explains the musicians know that "what they have to offer will be excitedly accepted."

They have a sense of making a real contribution to the parish.

St. John's is blessed with other ac-plished musicians who include a harpist, pianists, a flutist, a trumpet player and several guitarists. Together they provide a rich variety of music.

Planning liturgies requires a lot of time and care. Mrs. Salazar meets regularly with the parish priests as well as with a liturgy committee of 12 people who assist in liturgy planning.

In choosing music, Mrs. Salazar keeps a number of considerations in mind as she attempts to help make each liturgy "one of the high points of the people's week.

Does a particular selection complement a parish or diocesan theme? How does the music relate to the Scripture readings?

What song best conveys the particular intention of the Mass?

Mrs. Salazar admits there is still a problem in getting all the people involved. Some parishioners even say they "enjoy the music so much" they prefer to sit back and just listen.

To overcome this, Mrs. Salazar opens one rehearsal each month to the entire parish family. This begins informally with a party, and from 15 to 20 parishioners who are not in the group are invited to attend.

"We hope that by coming to the practice, people will feel more comfortable and more free to open up to come along with the groups in song," Mrs. Salazar explains.
Dear Dr. Kenny: We read your column about how important it is for a family to eat together. If that is the case, then our family is surely in trouble. I don’t think we have a single meal together during the week. My husband is off to work before our two children get down for breakfast. I work a 30-hour week and have lunch at the office. Our two middle-school children are rarely home from paper route, band practice or sports practice in time for us to eat dinner together as a family. What can we do?

A. Your situation is all too typical: a family of four pulled every which way by society. No wonder families are having trouble when the members no longer find it possible to share even a meal. You are right to be concerned about eating together. The meal is commonly used in literature as a symbol of community. Eating is one of those few and basic vital functions that serves to bind the participants together. People who eat together are more apt to maintain close relationships with one another. What can you do? Let’s analyze your situation. If you are not eating together as a family, then one or more of the family members is busy doing something else. School activities or job are taking priority over family. You may say that family comes first, but if you are never together for meals, then I think you should question your own statement.

Be practical. Sometimes you should try to put family first. There are 21 meals in most weeks. You ought to be able to find a way to share some of them together as a family. Some meals together are better than none.

What about breakfast? Can dad get to work a bit later on one day? Can your children get up earlier one day per week? Have a special breakfast treat. Set the table and do one of the meal preparation the night before. What about a Saturday brunch or a meal on Sunday after church? A little ingenuity plus a sense that family has priority can turn breakfast into a special meal. If lunch is out during the week, what about weekends? Can you have a special lunch on Saturday or Sunday? Keep it simple and short enough that it is enjoyed by all. It is more important that it happens regularly every week.

Dinner or supper time is the usual family meal. You may want to set aside one evening per week when the family meal comes ahead of practices, job or any social engagement. Plan a special menu. If members cannot make the regular dinner hour, you might arrange for a late evening meal once a week. Have a festive atmosphere as you sit down together. European-style, at 8 P.M. or 9 P.M. Snacks also offer an opportunity to eat together. Make an effort to plan a minimeal during a favorite television program that you all watch together, or allow some time before bed for a family get-together for snacks and conversations.

Eating together nowadays often requires special planning. However, for a family trying to stay close, it is important enough to warrant the extra trouble and planning.

The “1980-81 Pro-life goal of financial contributions from Florida’s Knights of Columbus is exceeding expectations,” stated K of C State “pro-life” Chairman Edward Joyce of Lake park.

The 1979-80 fraternal year produced statewide donations of $25,225.00, nearly 6,000 hours of program-work, and distribution of 25,120 “Roses for life,” according to reports. State Deputy Donald E. Raymond, Hialeah, reported that a financial goal in excess, of the 1979-80 year has been set.

Raymond said, “last year’s program over and above its objective. 1980 is the ‘Year of The Family’, so designated by the National Council of Catholic Bishops and by the Florida State Council, Knight of Columbus and we are attempting to better our programs and advance the cause of the preservation of human life in Florida.” Recent reports indicate that we are surpassing last year’s performance and with similar results during the remainder of the year we will exceed our goals,” Joyce said. “Pro-Life supports the life of the unborn and fosters close-knit organization and operation of the FAMILY, the most important social unit in our society.

According to chairman Joyce, Florida failed to ratify a constitutional amendment. However, he says the Courts January 1973 decision pertaining to “Right-to-Life,” therefore, “increased efforts are needed to insure the life of the unborn and continuation of the aged.”

Love in Action . . .
Archbishop tours sister diocese, poorest in hemisphere

It was in May, 1979, that out of concern for the people of Haiti, Archbishop Edward McCarthy sent the first team of Amor en Accion to that island, in the name of the Church of Miami, to deepen the relationship which he had begun in February, 1979, through his personal contact with Archbishop Luigi Conti, Apostolic Nuncio of Haiti.

The Archbishop had always expressed his desire that the Archdiocese of Miami reach beyond its boundaries and develop the consciousness of the universality of the Church in its missionary dimension. He had in mind, also, declaring the Diocese of Port de Paix, the poorest of the American hemisphere, as a sister diocese of the Archdiocese of Miami. A program of cooperation needed to be established that would meet the needs of the Diocese of Port de Paix, and Amor en Accion was to be the bridge.

Since that time, many Amor en Accion teams have visited the towns and villages of Port de Paix, bringing needed help, love and encouragement to their inhabitants. The most recent visit took place last month, and Archbishop McCarthy went along. Following is an account by Alicia Marill and Fr. Mario Vizcaino of Amor en Accion, of the people they met and the work they performed during their latest trip.

NOV. 4 — 3:30 P.M. — Archbishop Edward McCarthy and members of Amor en Accion arrive in Port au Prince, Haiti, where Archbishop Luigi Conti, apostolic nuncio and Fr. Boniface Fils-Aime, vicar general of the Diocese of Port de Paix, greet them. The Archbishop, Dr. Ramon Boza, Alicia Marill and Fr. Mario Vizcaino then embark on a five hour trip to the Diocese of Port de Paix in the Northern part of the island. By seven o'clock the sky turns pitch dark, but the jeep keeps bouncing along the dirt roads, rivers and mountains of this poorest of Haiti's dioceses. The spirit among the members of the expedition is high.

The jeep arrived at Port de Paix and Amor en Accion was to be the bridge.

At this hour, when threatening news floats in the air, the Church of Miami has shown her solidarity with the portion of the people of Haiti who are within her boundaries.

The gesture of the Archbishop speaks for itself.

After having delegated in many occasions the group Amor en Accion, he himself has wanted, in spite of his many commitments, to visit us.

We value his ever present sense of humor, his radiant joy, his easy approachability, his discreet charity.

The first time that we met was in Santo Domingo during the visit of the Holy Father John Paul II.

After that he invited me to his Archdiocese on the occasion of the consecration of his two auxiliaries, one Cuban and one American. This was my first action as a bishop.

TODAY WE MEET again in this Celebration, recalling the Last Supper of Holy Thursday where Christ gave to his Apostles the great commandment of love; where He instituted the priesthood; where He celebrated the first Eucharist to perpetuate his presence among us.

We would like to see in these repeated encounters the sign of a common belonging to a Church that goes beyond the frontiers of language, race and mentality.

There is but one language, the one of charity. Ubi caritas et amor deus ibi est (There where charity and love exists, there is God): IN Action.

early, but by 5:00 a.m. the vibrant rumor of the entire population coming alive again can be heard.

By 6:00 a.m., the streets are filled with life and color as men, women and children move fast with the Haitian rhythm toward the market, which will serve as chapel, school and meeting place for educational purposes. A time is set for different steps to be taken from now until January, when another visit of technical school is scheduled.

NOV. 7 — The group boards a plane back to Miami, feeling the shock of having been immersed in an entirely different cultural world, yet with the same love of God which makes us all brothers and sisters.

Archbishop McCarthy is greeted with flowers by the children of Nan Palan Nutritional Center. Fr. Mario Vizcaino stands by.

After Nan Palan, the group visits another nutritional center. Here, the mothers of the children learn handicrafts while helping to run the center.

The minor seminary, technical school, school for teachers, and fish farming project in the nearby village of Lavoud are the targets of early afternoon visits. The yearly salary of the cook of the technical school is paid by Amor en Accion.

THE AFTERNOON is spent meeting with the Housing Project Committee, Fr. Boniface Fils-Aime translates. Discussed are: The educational dimensions of the project for the people of Nan Palan, improving the nutritional center, changing certain aspects of the Housing model, constructing latrines and building a community center which will serve as chapel, school and meeting place for educational purposes.

A NEW DEVELOPMENT of this visit is the preparation of a health team led by Dr. Boza of Amor en Accion, which will serve the people of Nan Palan during a ten day visit in April, 1981.

At 8:30 a.m., the trip back to Port au Prince begins, with stops in the different parishes and chapels of Chansonile, Bassin Blue, Grosmorne and Gonaive, to greet the pastors and deliver and pick up mail.

The travelers arrive in Port au Prince at 3:00 p.m. That evening, the Apostolic Nuncio invites the Archbishop and Amor en Accion members to dinner.

That same morning, the entire visit is described in detail by the local radio station.

Couples get spiritual shot in arm at center

By Jose F. Alonso
Voice Spanish Editor

The Archdiocese Family Enrichment Center not only cares about the training of lay family ministers, it also worries about the continuing preparation of these couples.

To this end, one of the activities the center organizes is an Evening of Enrichment, where couples may deepen their spiritual lives.

Recently, 26 couples gathered during one of these evenings to hear Fr. Gerard LaCerra, Archdiocesan Chancellor, and pastor of St. Mary’s Cathedral, speak about “Building on Rock or Sand.”

THE EVENING began with Mass after which Fr. LaCerra told two anecdotes which made those gathered double up with laughter, but also prepared them for the serious thinking ahead.

In one, Father told of a lady who had dedicated her whole life to teaching CCD. She died and goes to heaven, where St. Peter joyously greets her, asking her what would make her happy.

She asks for a fifth grade religion class, and is shown into a roomful of sandy boys and girls. Unhappy, she asks if there is any other room where she can teach. St. Peter tells her there is only one other classroom, in the lower floors. She gladly accepts, and upon arrival finds a room full of screaming, spoiled kids, throwing erasers, notebooks and anything they can get their hands on, at each other.

SHE GLADLY exclaims, “This is where I belong.” And the moral of the story, Fr. LaCerra says is that “They who don’t want to change can go to…”

Serious, Father spoke about the interpretation of Scripture. For some, the Word directly affects their lives. Others—see God’s Word as written on stone, immutable and restricting. For others, the Gospel is merely a collection of phrases which have no bearing on their modern lives.

The same is true, he said, with Liturgy and the Sacraments. They are aimed at our human needs, spiritual and emotional, and have a bearing on our relationship with Christ.

Fr. LaCerra then asked those gathered to read and reflect on Matthew, 14:22-23, where Christ invites Peter to walk or the tempest-tossed boat.

THE EVENING ended with prayers of thanksgiving.

Advent
Celebrating in the home

Kathrine Bird is associate editor of the Know Your Faith series.

What Is Advent?
Advent is a time of expectation of joyful anticipation. For many people, the four weeks before Christmas are a genuinely exciting time, as family members hasten to wrap gifts and decorate the home. Children, especially little ones, are filled with thoughts of “what will Santa bring me?”

At the same time, Advent presents a challenge: How can this season be celebrated so that it reminds us of the birth of Jesus, so that its religious significance remains clearly focused? As the mother of four children, I always found Advent an easy season to celebrate religiously — precisely because my children always genuinely anticipated Christmas. They were anxious to participate in any activity which reminded them of the coming feast.

The Advent Wreath and Calendar

How to use the Advent wreath and calendar.

1. The Advent wreath originated in Germany many years ago.
2. Simplicity itself, the wreath is easy to make and can fit in almost anywhere.
3. Advent in homes, schools and institutions.

A. MATERIALS NEEDED: Evergreen branches, three tall purple candles and one pink candle, purple ribbons, a circular stand.

People can buy a stand at most religious bookstores. Or they can make one by crossing and fastening two pieces of plywood at right angles. Bore holes near the ends to hold the four candles. Or, find your own creative substitute, perhaps using simple candle holders with the greenery.

B. CONSTRUCTION: Place the greenery in a circular stand; position candles and tie ribbons into angles. Bore holes near the ends to hold the four candles. Or, find your own creative substitute, perhaps using simple candle holders with the greenery.

C. SYMBOLISM: The green branches represent hope for the coming of Jesus. The four candles refer to the coming of Jesus on the earth. Each purple candle represents one of the graces gained through the liturgical cycle.

D. HOW TO USE: At dinner on the Saturday before the first Sunday of Advent, bless the wreath. Light the first of the purple candles and say a short prayer together — perhaps a prayer from the Advent liturgy. Or, use a prayer listed below. Repeat this every night during the first week, burning the candle briefly each night.

The second Sunday, light two purple candles. Say a short prayer. Repeat each day during the week. On the third Sunday, light the two purple candles already used and the pink candle. This is Gaudete Sunday — a day of special celebration in the church. On the fourth Sunday, light all four candles. Family members might take turns lighting the candles and saying the prayers.

PRAYER FOR FIRST WEEK:
"Look! In Majesty the Lord is coming from afar and his glory fills all the earth."

PRAYER FOR SECOND WEEK:
"A shoot shall sprout from the stump of Jesse, and from his roots a bud shall blossom. The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: a spirit of wisdom and of understanding, a spirit of counsel and of strength, a spirit of knowledge and of fear."

What’s more, they understood what preparing for a baby’s birth meant. So they could appreciate somewhat, the mystery of Jesus’ birth.

For me, the Advent wreath and the Advent calendar were ways to weave together the spiritual threads of this season. Both can act as daily reminders of Advent. They also serve well as a starting point for family activities and family devotions.

What can we tell our families about Advent?
The word “Advent” means “coming” or “arrival” and refers to the coming of Jesus as a man. Though the precise origins of Advent as a season are somewhat obscure, the first Christians used the word to refer to the coming of Jesus on the feast of his incarnation.

In church liturgy, Advent provides Christians a time to deepen their awareness of Jesus Christ’s presence among human beings. During Advent, the church looks to the past, the present and the future:

- The Past, when Jesus came into the world as a man.
- The Present coming of Jesus in the church and within his followers.
- The Future or second coming of Jesus.

Ever since the ninth century, the first Sunday of Advent has marked the church’s Liturgical Year, as well. Pope John Paul II calls Advent the time when “the church takes up its conversation with God at the beginning.”

The Advent Calendar — Children Love Them!

Calendars are usually a single sheet of paper or cardboard featuring a series of closed shutters over windows. Each set of shutters covers a different brightly colored scene related to the Christmas story. Advent calendars can be purchased at religious stores, department and gift stores, and sometimes museums. Creative people may make their own.

My family usually puts the calendar in the dining room and opens the next set of shutters during dinner — the only meal of all of us routinely ate together.

Mom helps children make traditional wreath

By Kathrine Bird

The pictures behind the shutters of an Advent calendar are not religious. Instead they sport cheery scenes of Santa and his elves working on presents.

But use care in choosing an Advent calendar. Be sure of your purpose. Many calendars are not religious. Instead they sport cheery scenes of Santa and his elves working on presents.

If you want to stress the religious aspect of Christmas preparation then look for a calendar which highlights scenes pertaining to Jesus.

A calendar my children enjoyed was drawn on a map of the Holy Land. The final window revealed at lovely Christmas manger scene.

Advent calendars are a boon for parents who simply watch their children open one set of shutters each night beginning Dec. 1. The final picture is opened Christmas Eve. The pictures behind the shutters of an Advent calendar are drawn on opaque paper. When the sun streaming in each day illuminates the windows behind any shutters already opened, the brilliance of the colors shines through the shutters opened.

Carta del Arzobispo a los Esposos

Mie queridos hermanos en Cristo,

Durante este año de la familia les he escrito varias cartas acerca de la vida familiar. Ahora aprovecho esta oportunidad para dedicarles esta carta a ustedes los que son esposos y esposas. Quiero que este medio expresarles mi afecto y admiración. Yo los estimo por el amor que se tienen entre sí, y pienso que nuestros matrimonios son como un medio providencial de procrear y cuidar de sus hijos.

Sin embargo, yo veo algo más en el enlace de cada uno de ustedes, algo más profundo que me interesa. Ustedes no son solamente compañeros del uno con el otro, sino compañeros también de otro amor, que es el amor de Nuestro Señor. El ama a cada una de las ovejas de su rebaño, y esta una de las razones por la que instituyó el sacramento del matrimonio, para que cada uno de los cónyuges pudiera demostrar su amor, el esposo cuidando a la esposa, y la esposa cuidando del esposo, y los dos en nombre del Señor.

Así también, mis queridos esposos y esposas, así como ustedes se aman entre sí, así como se abrazan, son都不能 y la comunicación, su habilidad de buscar el perdón, tratar de complacer a su esposo o esposa. Su madurez, su habilidad de buscar el perdón, tratar de complacer a su esposo o esposa. Su madurez, su habilidad de buscar el perdón, tratar de complacer a su esposo o esposa.

El Santo Padre ha dicho, “El cuerpo humano con su sexo, su masculinidad y su feminidad, visto en el mismo misterio de la creación, no es solo una fuente de esterilidad y procreación...pero incluye desde el mismo principio el atributo ‘nupcial’, que es, la capacidad de expresar amor: ese amor precisamente, en el cual viene a ser un regalo y... a través de este regalo, llenar el verdadero cometido que es su existencia’ (L’Observatore Romano, Enero 21, 1980).

Mis queridos amigos, han sido llamados para testificar en una ‘forma especial la compasión y la fidelidad de Cristo: en estos momentos en que la sociedad y el mundo están en crisis. Por su relación sacramental traen a Cristo a su familia, su comunidad cristiana y a todo el mundo.

Yo les explico, no permitan ser infieles al llamado y a Jesús, aceptando las tentaciones, dificultades y pruebas que encontran en el camino en estos tiempos seculares, donde la infidelidad, métodos artificiales anticonceptivos y Abortos son permitidos. No tengan miedo de ir contra de la corriente de pensamientos y opiniones ofrecidos por las normas de conducta paganas.

Como nunca en la historia, las parejas de matrimonios tienen una obligación, compartiendo alegrias y tristezas, es una función de la Iglesia. Es la vida especial de ternura. El sacramento del matrimonio es una forma de consagración al deber y dignidad de su estado. Por él, se compenetran con el espíritu de Cristo.

El matrimonio cristiano los hace fuertes para soportar y alentar y ayudarse, no solo en las necesidades temporales, pero aún más, para ayudarlos en las necesidades espirituales en este peregrinaje hacia la eternidad. Quizás, nosotros creemos y religiosos, escribimos mucho acerca de la sanidad desde el punto de vista del celibato. Ustedes, esposas y esposos, tienen una propa y fructífera espiritualidad, una espiritualidad conjugal, que necesita ser espiritualmente y desarrollada, ustedes tienen sus propios dones y gracias, su propio ascesmo, su propia recomendación tomada del Evangelio acerca de la pobreza, sacrificándose generosamente en beneficio del otro cónyuge y de los hijos.

Ustedes tienen su propia virtud de la castidad, en la fidelidad de cada uno de ustedes y también en la moralidad, como aparece en el Evangelio, el voto de obediencia para tratar de complacer a su esposa o esposo. Su madurez emocional y el compromiso de uno por el otro, la sinceridad y la comunicación, su habilidad de buscar el perdón, tratar de complacer a su esposo o esposa. Su madurez emocional y el compromiso de uno por el otro, la sinceridad y la comunicación, su habilidad de buscar el perdón, tratar de complacer a su esposo o esposa.

Yo deseo que ustedes sepan que la Iglesia los estima, los ama, y les desea que sigan siendo fiel a su amor de Nuestro Señor.

Gran Exito la Noche de Gala del MFC

En la noche del pasado Sabado 29 de Noviembre tuvo lugar la Cena de Gala y el XII Encuentro del Movimiento Familiar Cristiano en un conocido hotel de esta ciudad de Miami. Mas de 300 matrimonios del MFC prensionaron la toma de posesion de la nueva directiva y la entrega de certificados a los matrimonios que han cumplido su treinta aniversario de vida conjugal.

Entre los varios oradores, directivos salientes y entrantes, se destacaron el Bispo Mons. Agustin Roman, el Rev. P. Angel Villaronga, Asesor del MFC de Miami y Terry y Mirni Reilly, directores del Family Enrichment Center, de la Arquidiócesis de Miami.

Monsenor Roman expuso las conclusiones del reciente Sinodo sobre la Familia en la Sociedad Actual, repitiendo las palabras del Sumo Pontífice Juan Pablo II de que “la sociedad cava su tumba sin proteger al matrimonio y a la familia”. Hablo también de la urgente necesidad de que las familias tomen su puesto en la campaña de evangelizando a otras familias. Agradeció a el Movimiento Familiar Cristiano su esfuerzo y su dedicación en la promocion de los valores cristianos en las parroquias y la arquidiocesis y los urgió a que “sigan trabajando por la familia”.

Con voz emocionada hablo de las numerosas familias que han sido separadas por la triste situación creada con el exodo cubano. Dijo “En nombre de todos los que no obvien a los que ahora sufren... los sparados por el exodo cubano... He visto hombres llorando porque fueron separados de sus esposas e hijos que luego no dejaron salirse nada mas triste para mi que ver a un hombre llorar...”.Senao,q toma que tenemos una obligación con estas tantas vidas recién llegadas, acercarnos a ellas para llevarles el mensaje de amor y esperanza de Cristo.

Tiempo de Adviento

Cómpran el año eclesiástico con el tiempo de Adviento. Adviento quiere decir advenimiento o venida. Es época de meditación y preparación para la Navidad: es decir, la natividad del Niño Dios en Belén. Sí a nosotros cada vez que Adviento quiere decir advenimiento y tiempo de Adviento.

Inmaculada Concepción

DICEMBRE 8

La concepción inmaculada de la Santísima Virgen María era ya una creencia piadosa de los fieles católicos, muy extendida en España en las colonias, muchos antes que el Santo Papa Pío IX definiera el dogma en Diciembre 8 de 1854. De inmediato España.

PARA OBREROS MIGRANTES

Estimados amigos en Cristo:

Al aproximarnos a las fiestas de Navidad, les pido su ayuda para las miles de familias de trabajadores migratorios del Sur de la Florida que se encuentran viviendo en la miseria y la pobreza.

La Arquidiócesis de Miami patrocina programas que asisten a estas familias y les ayudan a encontrar medios básicos de subsistencia.

Bajo la dirección de nueve sacerdotes, veintiocho religiosas y varios empleados, la Arquidiócesis mantiene centros de cuidados diurnos, programas de educación para adultos y también ofrece ayuda de vivienda y alimentos a familias necesitadas.

Nuestro amor a Dios se mide por nuestro amor al prójimo. Les ruego que, en el verdadero espíritu de la Navidad, cooperen generosamente a esta colecta, para que hagamos algo por ayudar a nuestros más abandonados hermanos y hermanas en Cristo. La Colecta para las Misiones Entre Familias Migratorias se llevará a efecto con toda la Arquidiócesis el domingo 14 de diciembre de 1980.

Con mi gratitud personal por el amor y el interés que ustedes siempre han mostrado hacia el Pobre, queda el Suyu afectísimo en Cristo,

"Para Cuba que Sufre, Mi Primera Palabra"

Por Hna. Bertha Penabad

Esta frase lapidaria podría cambiarse así: "Para mi iglesía que sufre mi Primera Palabra". Y mi iglesía sufre no sólo de la opresión que le pueda brindar regímenes totalitarios, tanto de izquierda como de derecha, todos deseano alienarla, sino a veces de sus mismos queridos hijos que, por defenderla, a veces casi la despedazan.

La iglesia de Cuba no es excepción. Desde que el mundo es mundo y a Dios se le ocurrió fundar esta frágil barquilla, (cuidado, que aunque frágil lleva ya 2.000 años muy vivita y coloreando) el hombre ha hecho todo lo posible por anéxarsela. No más leer el recuento de las guerras de independencia, ni las monedas. Nuestra cultura hispana y la hispanos aquí como en Hon-}

¡Evitemos el Banderismo Absurdo!

por Eugenia L. Acosta

¿Cuántas veces hemos escuchado frases como estas: “Esos cubanos...”, “Tienen que ser buenos...”, “De los mejicanos nada me asombra...”, “Guatemaltecos...”, “Tienen que ser...” y otras muchas parecidas? Con demasiada frecuencia oímos, y hasta algunas veces las hemos dicho. Ocurre todo el tiempo; en la calle, en fiestas, en reuniones sociales, en tiendas, en el autobús, por teléfono, en la prensa escrita y hasta por radio y televisión.

“Estas son simples frases inofensivas y superficiales que decimos porque a veces otros hispanos nos insultan, nos molestan y hasta nos hacen daño”, dicen muchos tratando de excusarlas. Lo cierto del caso es que esas frases, y la que catalogar a las personas por sus países de origen, hacia quienes nos decimos a nosotros mismos y a todos los demás, que somos lo que piensan y lo que hacemos.

La Iglesia Catedral de La Habana.

Hoy en Polonia, la iglesia en sus militares (porque la iglesia no son los obispos y las monjas y los curas sino todos los fieles) nos da un ejemplo de valentía y lucha pacífica, por unos derechos que no pueden contumaz. Seguramente no faltaron palabras que hayan una vez criticado tal o cual gesto de su iglesia. Críticas de hijos, siempre benéficas.

Lo que sí duele es cuando de niños, sentados al calor de nuestras palmeras aquí en Miami, o en otro sitio, donde ya descansamos del bregar de la isla que nos vivió nacer, que por ser de corcho lleva tan ariosos los vendibales, por no decir otra cosa, se oye criticar a alguno de nuestros prelados, acusándolos de colaboración... Yo tuve el gran privilegio de asistir en Cuba, en la iglesia de Reina (P. Jesuitas), a la confirmación de 40 adultos en momentos en que realmente este gesto era comprometedor. Venía de España y visitaba la isla con permiso especial para enterrar a mi madre. Allí, en España, había oído los comentarios de algunos extranjos que decían: “son unos colaboracionistas, etc.” Frente a la multitud que llenaba la iglesia, mi pensamiento se movía a través de los mares, dividido entre lo que había oído y lo que veía. La respuesta me la dieron esos cristianos, que al abrazar-}

RIO DE JANEIRO (NC) - El anillo de oro que el Papa Juan Pablo II regaló a los moradores de la "favela" o tugurio de Vírgul debido a la futura visita a Río en julio se ha vuelto tema de controversia. Cílixis Dos, jefe de la "favela" Dona Vitalia, propuso que se exhibiera en varias ciudades del Brasil para recoger fondos y ayudar a éstos y otros tugurios y el vicario de pastoral que recibió el anillo. P. Ilano Calvino, estaba de acuerdo. Pero el cardenal de la Nova Silva y el arzobispo cardenal Eugenio Sales pareció darle la razón porque el regalo fue a la iglesia, no a la comunidad, aunque estaba dispuesta a escuchar otras razones. Un vendedor de legumbres, José Leandro da Silva, sugirió que "escibámos al papa y que se decidiera.

El Banderismo...
(Viene de la pag. 3A)

Tiempo adverso y nuestra confianza enorme en la voluntad y firmeza del Señor. Son ejemplos concretos de vida cristiana, tanto para los hispanos como para los no hispanos de esta ciudad. Pero, además de lo mucho que tenemos en común, existen muchas peculiaridades y diferencias de actitud y filosofía de la vida entre nosotros los hispanos. Además de las diferencias obvias de las expresiones típicas, frases, comidas y hasta sentido del humor, en general, hay unos hispanos que no se alegran mucho con los otros, que tienen celos mutuos y no quieren cooperar con los demás. Si queremos triunfar y ser reconocidos en esta década de los 80, si queremos que se nos reconozca y nos se respete, tenemos que usar nuestras tradiciones y cultura, tenemos que demostrar la capacidad de poner a un lado lo que nos separa y conocer uno con otro en todo lo que tenemos en común, que es mucho.

Los síntomas de ese banderismo, que a veces no nos nos, tienen que desaparecer cuanto antes. Con esto no insinúo de manera alguna que debemos pasar por alto tradiciones nacionales ni nuestro patriotismo. Simplemente opino que sería muy bueno que tratáramos todos de poner más atención a lo que nos une y olvidar lo que nos separa. Deberá hacerse cristianamente... y cuanto antes.

Aprendemos de nuestros hermanos; cada uno tiene algo que enseñaros. Sólo así trascenderemos como pueblo hispano y seremos reconocidos como es debido en todas las áreas. Compartimos mucho pero nuestra rica diversidad de tradiciones, costumbres y valores. Sólo así nos daremos cuenta de que aunque todas las banderas son importantes, la mejor bandera es la de Cristo puesto que es de todos por todos.

ROMA (NC) - Varios temblores sacudieron la zona meridional de Italia después del terremoto del 24 de noviembre que según el recuento más reciente causó 3,000 muertos y más de 2,000 heridos. El Papa Juan Pablo II se dirigió a Nápoles el 25 para luego visitar Potenza, Balvano y otros sitios afectados por la tragedia. Consolar a los sobrevivientes y alentar a los que prestan socorro, la mitad de Potenza fue destruida por el terremoto, y en Balvano el desarme del templo causó la muerte de más de 40 fieles. Acompañaron al papa su vice-presidente de estado, el cardenal Agostino Casaroli y el secretario Mons. Eduardo Martinez Somol. "Se renunció como hermano a compartir su dolor," dijo a un grupo cerca de las ruinas de Balvano.

CIUDAD DEL VATICANO

Casi 800 personas murieron en los escombros y más de mil quedaron heridas. "Te lo mis fervientes oraciones por todas las víctimas y sus familias," añadió y agradece la ayuda generosa que prestan los socorristas. Más de 500,000 asistieron al acto celebrado en el santuario del Virgen del Carmen.
