Restructuring at Radio Paz

Station partners with EWTN for programming, lays off 15 employees

Florida Catholic January 2011

MIAMI — Citing financial reasons, Radio Paz, the non-profit Spanish-language Catholic radio station in Miami that once broadcast to the entire Latin American region, announced its restructuring Thursday in English and Spanish. The station, which lays off 15 employees, will continue to broadcast its programming on EWTN.

The move, announced by station officials in a press release Thursday, comes as the Miami-based station, which is owned by the Archdiocese of Miami, struggles to maintain its financial viability. The station's programming will continue to be aired on EWTN, which is owned by the Legion of Christ, a conservative religious order.

The restructuring will result in the loss of 15 jobs, including those of the station's general manager, operations manager, and technical staff.

The Archdiocese of Miami said in a statement that the decision was made after “a thorough analysis of the station’s financial situation and the challenges it faces.” The Archdiocese also cited the station’s increasing reliance on EWTN for programming as a factor in the decision.

Radio Paz was founded in 1987 and has been broadcasting to Spanish-speaking audiences in the Miami region for more than 30 years. The station’s programming includes news, talk shows, and music.

The Archdiocese said it will continue to support the station and will work with EWTN to ensure that its programming continues to reach Spanish-speaking audiences.

The Archdiocese also announced that it has reached an agreement with EWTN to continue broadcasting its programming on EWTN, which is owned by the Legion of Christ.

The Archdiocese said it has been in discussions with EWTN for several years about the possibility of broadcasting its programming on the network.

The Archdiocese said it expects EWTN to begin broadcasting its programming on Radio Paz’s frequency in early 2011.
